

MRS. DODGE WAS CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER

Jury Reported Verdict in the Essex County Case This Morning and Woman Will be Sentenced on Monday Afternoon.

CONVICTED OF KILLING WILLIAM HEATH

Heath Met His Death While Engaged in Painting Interior of Mrs. Dodge's House in Lunenburg Last September.

Guilford, May 13.—Guilty of manslaughter was the verdict returned today in the case of Mrs. Florence M. Dodge, who has been on trial in Essex county court for the past two weeks for the murder of William Heath at Mrs. Dodge's home in Lunenburg September 17, last. The jury reported the verdict at the opening of court this morning at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Dodge will be sentenced Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. There is general approbation of the sentence here. Very few exceptions were taken during the course of the trial, and it is not known whether the case will be taken higher.

Hardly a trace of emotion crossed the face of Mrs. Dodge when she heard from the lips of the foreman of the jury that she had been found guilty of manslaughter. Neatly dressed in sombre black, the woman sat impassive as the verdict was returned. Then she sank into a seat between her daughter, Mrs. Ida Bell, who has been her constant attendant during the trial, and one of her attorneys, Harry Blodgett.

Mrs. Dodge was remanded in the custody of the sheriff.

Aside from the respondent, her counsel, the prosecuting attorneys, relatives of the woman, court officials and newspaper men, there was hardly anyone in court when the session began this morning.

The case was given to the jury at 8:10 last night, Judge Hall having charged them at 7:30. The jury returned at 9:45 and asked to have the statute covering second degree murder and manslaughter read again, after which they went back and were locked up for the night.

In his charge, Judge Hall instructed the jury that it could not find a verdict of murder in the first degree because of the absence of evidence to show premeditation.

Porter H. Dale, for the woman, said he did not want the jury to consider the sex of the client, the fact that her natural protector was in his grave, nor did he want to play on their sympathies. At this point Mrs. Dodge broke out weeping, the first sign of emotion shown during the trial. The state had tried to prove her guilty by a play upon words and by putting a distorted construction on things she said under stress of intense mental excitement. He said it was but natural she should say she did not know the gun was loaded and her exclamation that she would probably have to go up for it was not to be construed as an admission of guilt.

She realized that because they were alone in the house at the time—suspicion would point at her. He then took up her other statements made immediately after the shooting and showed they were prompted, not by guilt, but by regret that there was no one present to bear witness to her innocence. Attorney General Sargent made a calm, coldly analytical plea. He apparently made a strong impression on the jury. He said the defense had abandoned the idea of suicide, but the defense objected to this point and he passed on. With a fish rod and a revolver, he demonstrated that if the revolver had been dropped on the trigger, the bullet could not have gone above the knee. He took up the anonymous letter and showed places where Mrs. Dodge used two styles of "M" in signing her name, thus controverting the claim of the defense that the letter could not have been written by Mrs. Dodge on account of the difference in the letter "M."

The shooting of Heath. The shooting of Heath took place in a bedroom of the Dodge house, where he was painting. About noon of September 17 Mrs. Dodge was seen running out of her house, crying that Heath had been shot. She said that she was working in the kitchen at the time, and heard several shots. She entered the bedroom and saw Heath, she said, and then she tried to give him some brandy to revive him.

When the autopsy was performed, the doctors reported that Heath could not have shot himself, as the bullet entered the back and passed through the heart, coming out in front and lodging in the shirt. Two other bullets, grazed the threshold. Heath was 40 years old. Mrs. Dodge, a widow, is about 50.

TO MEET IN BURLINGTON.

Grand Chapter of Vermont, O. E. S., June 7 and 8.

Burlington, May 13.—The 30th annual session of the Grand Chapter of Vermont, O. E. S., will be held in the Masonic Temple, Burlington, Wednesday and Thursday, June 7 and 8, commencing at four o'clock of the first named day. The opening will be informal, and adjournment will immediately take place to Thursday morning at nine o'clock.

The first day, undoubtedly, will be a busy session, there being a large volume of business to transact; and it is possible the reading and adoption of the revised constitution and digest may prolong the evening's exercises until a late hour. The importance of well considering the first radical revision of the order's organic law, a report on which was laid over from the session of 1910, transcends all trivial measures or those of less moment which may be proposed.

Parker was about 23 years of age and had been hunting woodchucks. Beside the body and rifle were found a ramrod and in the magazine of the rifle was found an undischarged shell, while in the breech was one that had been fired. The bullet struck Parker nearly between the eyes, pointing upward and tore the front part of the skull nearly off. Dr. M. F. Blodgett was called but the victim was past aid. That road controls the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain, the western terminal of which is in this town, and it is natural that Mr. Mellen should desire to make connections at Alburt with the Rutland, which is closely allied with the Boston & Maine.

A few miles separate Swanton and Alburt.

DISTRIBUTES U. S. MONEY.

Census Causes Loss In Eight Counties; Gain in Six.

State Treasurer E. H. Devault sent out notices yesterday covering the redistribution of the United States deposit money among the towns of the state, on the basis of the last census. There are now 355,956 people in the state and the fund amounts of $869,086.79, giving a per capita amount of $1.87 plus. There are 100 towns showing a loss, ranging from $5.58 in the case of Baltimore to $841.75 in the case of Pownall. Six counties show a net gain, the highest being Washington with $7,111.08.

These figures show pretty closely the rise and fall in the population of the state, although in a few cases the comparison is misleading owing to the fact that a town's gain in per cent. terms is not as large as that of the state.

Grand Isle county shows a loss in every town. St. Albans gained slightly in population but loses some of its share. Randolph gained $117.60. Barre city is the star community of the state. It gained more than the net gain of any county except Rutland and more than the aggregate of all the counties except Rutland, Chittenden and Windsor.

The gain of some of the larger towns is as follows: Rutland, $3,073; Burlington, $2,180; St. Johnsbury, $1,572; Hardwick, $1,215; Colechester, $1,703; Braintree, $1,246; Pittsford, $1,030; Proctor, $1,237; Barre town, $1,263; Springfield, $2,310; Northfield, $505; and Waterbury, $681.

FIRE IN MILLS.

Burlington, May 13.—Shortly after one o'clock this morning, fire broke out in the wharf of the American Woolen company's mills at Winslow.
